The Anti-Monopolist Flasco.

CHICAGO, July 6th.—The morning journals de-iominate the National Anti-Monopoly Convention a lasco. With nearly three hundred delegates, the Convention dwindled down to about fifty at the lose. Denis Kearney claims to have evidence that the affair was engineered largely by what he terms three Washington lobbyists, and that he will show up their true character at the meeting next Sunday, when he will answer the editorial in the Times, which combats his views on the railroad question. He contends in the matter of freight charges that while cellectively, they are large still when the large. while collectively they are large, still, when taken in the case of the individual purchaser of a suit of clothes, as an illustration, they are merely nominal. Mr. Kearney says he goes to New York city from here, where he will address the workingmen in Cooper Institute, and then go to Ohio. The Senatorial Contest in New Hampshire.

CHICAGO, July 6th.—A special from Washington says: A gentleman who just came from Concord says Senator Ro lins nas had no chance for re-election since the caucus was held, but there are no indications yet afforded of what the result will be. The cardidates will be the horizontal to the condition of the conditio tions yet anoroed of what the result will be. The candidates will have about equal chances so far as can be seen. Secretary Chandler has no chance. He is going to Concord to morrow to be where he can take advantage of any favorable circumstance. Secretary Chandler has made just as determined enemies in his political management of this State as Senator Rollins has. Both of them have strong friends and equally determined opponents, and it happens the present Legislature contains opponents numerous enough to prevent the election of either of them. CONCORD, July 6th .- A ballot for United States

Rollins men have been in a secret conference this afternoon, with a view of agreeing upon a candidate to support for Senator next week. It is stated that they were unable to agree, and another meeting will be held on Tuesday evening.

The Reported Defeat of United States Troops by the Crees.

Chicago, July 6th. —A special from Helena, Mont. says: The reported defeat of Lieutenant-Colonel says: The reported defeat of Lieutenant-Colonel IIges by the northern Crees is faise. IIges was notified by Major Shurtleff, of the Canadian police, that 150 Crees, under Little Pine, had left their Agency and gone south in Montana, probably on a horse-stealing expedition. IIges immediately took the field with 160 men, two companies of cavalry and two of infantry, in summer camp at Sweetgrass Hills, near the line of the reserve. The Indians were found on the morning of the 3d by scouts, and shots were exchanged, without effect. The scouts then fell back, and the Crees fied north. They were followed to the line, where the troops turned back. The report of the defeat was started by a cattle hunter, who heard the firing and saw the scouts ride hastily back toward the main column. The troops have not yet returned to Assiniboine.

At New York the pilgrims will be joined by a delegation of Eastern Knights. The entire party will number about 200.

Belmont's Domestic Relations. New York, July 6th.—Young Belmont is frequently met upon the fashionable thoroughfares, at the Casino and elsewhere. There is much sympathy expressed openly for his young bride, who is a favorite in Newport society. It is understood both parties will ask for a divorce—Belmont on the ground of desertion. He will claim that he has a home in Oakland, where his wife would be welcome, while the wife will ask for a speedy separation upon grounds which will be made public at the proper time. The friends of both parties have vainly endeavored to effect a reconciliation.

An Intensely Thrilling Dispatch.

Chicaeo, July 6th.—A New York letter, speaking of the personal attractiveness of Mrs. Langtry and her "fag," as Gebhardt is termed, says: The Lily is not out of sight of New York, although she may have dropped out of mind. With other people she rides down to the races of the Coney Island Jockey Clob atop of Freddie Gebhardt's four-in-hand coach. She looks more nearly beautiful, as compared with women about her, than when seen on the stage, for her wondrously smooth skin and delicate complexion sunlight. A man with a back like a turtle and a face like a boiled lobster joined her in her box during Freddie's absence, and chatted with her. He proved to be a theatrical manager. When Freddie returned she showed no disposition to dismiss the returned she showed no disposition to dismiss the six man in a hurry. He got so jealously angry that his state of mind was plainly visible in his face. Mrs. Langtry smiled covertly, and seemed to enjoy his discomfiture, but the Lily soon he discovered to be an apparition from an intense of the movement of the ship. It is easy to imagine the horror of Ferdinand at what he believed to be an apparition from an other world. When at length it was explained to him what had happened, he gave orders that a boat should be lowered and taken to Naples for Christian burial. But the superstitious Sicilians dared not obey the royal command, and the ship, drawing in its wake the upwright body of the Admiral, sailed slowly into the Bay of Naples. Here a boat's crew was obtained from au English man-of-war, who is lost the sound of the ship. It is now graven on the tablet of history that his state of mind was deposited in his own palace, and at length received the last rites of the church. Notes and Queries.

JOHN BRIGHT'S ANNIVERSARY A NA-TION'S TRIBUTE

Eketch of His Eventful Public Career-A True Man Belonging to All English-Speaking Peoples.

LONDON, June 14, 1883. This has been in a pre-eminent sense John Bright's week. His name has been on all lips, and his character and deeds have formed the leading topic of discussion in the newspapers of the country. The occasion of this wide spread interest is the celebration gotten up in his honor by his constituency at Birmingham. This, at least, is the immediate cause of it, though there are others which are not far to seek. Behind this local celebration, throwing it into national prominence, investing it, inhaired, calm-faced man, who was the central figure of Monday's procession, is a millions was reflected; and, as Shakespeare has said with reference to a different occa-

The pageant reminded one of the triumphs accorded the ancient conquerors, and yet, how widely different was it from these, for the victories celebrated are those of peace, not of war, while he who wears the laurel wreath has always been a man of peace. It was his advocacy of this princi ple that led to his connection with Birmingham. His career in Parliament covers a period of forty years. He was first elected from Durham in 1843, and four years afterwards consented to stand for Manchester, being returned for that town without opposition. In 1852 he was re-elected. Then began the agitation which resulted in the Crimean war. That war he opposed from first to last, forfeiting, in so doing, both the popularity he had won in the country and his Manchester to some calmer moment, when I may have an opportunity of speaking before some portion of my countrymen, the lesson in favor of peace at this period that his COVERS A PERIOD OF FORTY YEARS in favor of peace at this period that his health gave way under them. In the campaign in which he was defeated he was not able to make a single speech, and this circumstance, doubtless, has much to do with the result. But this defeat was most honorable to Mr. Bright, for, as the Manchester Examiner said at the time, "A few words spoken or unspoken, a little trimming, a degree of suppleness on great questions, which is afterwards set down as prudence, would have sufficed to have insured him the undisturbed enjoyment of popularity, but true to the i st nots of a noble nature, he has chosen an opposite course." Four months after being cast off by Manchester he was returned to Parliament by the town which now celebrates its silver wedding with him. Once again, recently, has he marked his detestation of war; not this time in ringing words, but by an action that spoke with louder voice. His lips the country by resigning, and he did this,

Mr. Bright's combined advocacy through life of the principles which animated his early career is a fact which makes his position sented Birmingham in Parliament his conamong British statesmen somewhat unique. Most of the others who have attained prominence have undergone great changes. Since then these whilom antagonists have come to be, on almost all great questions, entirely in accord with each brought about solely by the changes which Mr. Gladstone has undergone, for Mr. Bright has remained the same. That the open to conviction is nothing to his discredit; it is an indication rather that he is of the present. an honest man following the light as it is revealed to him. I was then in the depths of grief-I may almost say of despair-for the light and sunshine of my house had been extinguished, All that was left of my young wife, except the memory of a sainted life and a too brief happiness, was lying still and cold in the chamber above us. Mr. Cobden called on me as his friend, and addressed me, as you may suppose, with words of condolence. scattered among a considerable number, althoug carefully examined at the time for scale, were found in June, 1831, to have a few scales upon them. These were at once washed with the above strength of lye, which destroyed the scale completely upon three of those trees, so that none subsequently appeared. On two of them, however, a live scale or two must have remained on the trunk of the tree at the surface of the ground untouched by the lye, as in September following a few young scales were discovered, located close to the ground. These were above, was found some scales, November 7, 1881.
This tree, being entirely dormant, was washed with lye one pound to one gallon of water, comwatched all these trees, and at this date no scale can be discovered in the entire orchard. Should any heresfter appear, the treatment will be by lye, one pound to one gallon of water. With this suc-cess in my two years' individual practice, I feel justified in repeating the statement I made at the first state Fruit Growers' Convention, that young orchards can be kept free from the Aspidiotus perniciosus by the right use of concentrated lye as a winter wash, and the whale-oil soap and sulphur mixture for summer.

The egg plum last referred to showed when spurs from the application than any previous tree washed. Many of the spurs were killed, but that was attributable to the possible ex-tra strong washing and the particular state of the weather at that time, a long period of hot, glaring days and drought prevailing. This tree, however, has recovered its vigor and healthy growth, and has made over three feet of new wood at this time.

I enter thus particularly upon this subject of importance and interest to the horticulturist. This season I can find no trace of this scale in my orchard, and feel sure that none are in it and can only appear as they may from time to time be brought by birds. With regard to treatment I am more fully convinced than ever before that the proper remedies have been used, viz: Whale-oil soup and sulphur mixture for summer, and American concentrated lye for winter. The fact is more fully developed that where we have so serious a pest to encounter we must use remedies adequate to the emergency. For three years has my orchard shown by in my reports the presence of this dreaded pest, and yet I have been enabled to suppress it and eradicate it, and in no single instance has it been allowed to spread from an infested tree to another. This, I consider, is the best proof of the effectiveness of the treatment adopted. I repeat that encouragement should

Three years since a few of the same scale were found on two Newtown pippin apple trees, but the washing mentioned for the oyster-shell scale cleaned them away and no more were seen un-til this past winter. This tree was washed with lye, but not all of the insects were destroyed, and a recent investigation discovered fifty of the scale upon the tree, which were crushed, and the eggs under them. From this tree probably the young had crawled and been carried to other trees, so that in one block of 140 trees 46 of them had specimens, in all amounting to 430 scale. From another block of 205 trees 613 scale were taken. When the leaves have fallen the trees will be washed with the whale-oil soap and sulphur mixture, which will probably eradicat this insect. No other scale exists in the orchard, and this one is considered of minor importance when compared with the more destructive insects. The codling moth has thus far this season taken for its suppression last season. The bands were applied on the 12th of May, and have been examined five times since applied, with a total result of 98 larvæ discovered to date. I have endeavored to answer in part the points presented in your request, and yet have not been able, for want of space in this communication, to even touch upon many matters of the greatest importance in the successful care and management of an orchard. Permit me to impress upon all engaged in horticulture the necessity of constant vigilance and untiring effort in this enjoyable and ennobling pursuit, if thus carried on, but one which will only bring loss and discouragement if neglected. A PAINTER'S VENGEANCE

Thirty years ago the Belgian painter, Antoine Wiertz, was astonishing the artistic world by the powerful but extravagant productions which are now exhibited

Though his brush was generally occupied with classical subjects or weird allegorical ever, which he only accorded to those whose physiognomy happened to interest him. It may be added that his taste including short these courtesies with scant clined rather to the grotesque and eccentric than the beautiful.

One day he received a visit from a cerperpetuated by the celebrated artist. Wiertz was aware of his visitor's failing; nevertheless he acceded to his request without demur. The fact was, he had been ! conquered at first sight by the old scriven-er's picturesque head. That head was a "But—excuse cranium, wrinkled forehead, shaggy brows | not resemble you in the least. See-here | overhanging the small, piercing eyes, is your letter to that effect." hooked nose, and thin-lipped mouth, which shut like a trap. Wiertz was fascinated, and while his visitor was pompously explaining his wishes the artist was taking mental note of every line and feature.

DYSPEPSIA AND ITS TREATMENT.

One distinguished authority goes so far as to aver that seven out of ten of all sore ailments by which men are afflicted have their origin in mistreatment of the stomach. There can be no question but that the Americans make of their digestive organs the veriest slaves. Whoever reads Dr. Felix Oswald's paper on dyspepsia in the current number of the Popular Science Monthly must conclude, on the basis of are in atonement for the meanest of sins. glattony, and abuse of an organ most mathe sufferer to believe that he is attacked rheumatism, heartburn, pains in the back. vertigo, headache, langor, gnawing hunger, depression of vitality, numbness of the limbs, singing of the ears, loss of appetite, painful drawing agonies in the muscles, eructations, feverish symptoms, bad dreams, oppression upon the lungs, sleeplessness, dizziness, etc., who never blame for them, and that, except the dyspepsia is chronic, the remedy is in their own hands. We cannot pause to even ments against our people for the mad haste with which they seek to bring untold miseries upon themselves and their children. It must suffice to say that the observation and experience of every middleaged person confirm every essential charge spices and peppers, beer swilling, tea, coffee, tobacco, absinthe, rich cakes and preserves, excessively hot food and drinks, constant dosing with medicines, close bedrooms, insufficient athletic exercise, bolting of food, lack of ventilation of offices and houses, nervousness and worry, the increase of stimulating dishes, starving for eight hours and stuffing for one, we are becoming a nation of dyspepties; sallow, languid, hollow-eyed and haggard: resting ill, working at disadvantage : our tempers soured, the mental powers handicapped, and the physical system overtaxed. The master plumbers at the East have organized an association to protect the interests of the craft, It has been generally supposed this class could take care of itself without any special organization, but it appears that the plumbers have a dire enemy in the shape of the Sanitary Engineer, who has come into the business of late, and so oversized the bills of the suffering plumbers that there is nothing left for them by the time the "new-fangled fellows" get through with the unfortunate property-owner. The public may now indulge in the hope that the plumbers and the engineers will reduce each other to such a state that freeholders and householder may have a fair show for their rights.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 4, 1883. The usual snapping and cracking, parading and speech-making, show that the patriotism that vents itself in explosion is alive and active. There is the usual wail about the danger to be apprehended from fireworks, and everyone is warned to have the trusty garden hose screwed to a faucet and ready for use at a moment's notice. Happily thus far the blazes have been insignificant. Fourth of July is the people's great day, and nothing should be done to damp their ardor in celebrating it as noisily and demonstratively as they please—if indeed anything could restrain their zeal ipon a national holiday. It is somewhat fashion to sneer at the day we celebrate and the way we do it, but the contemptuous ones must be aged and infirm dyspeptics who shot off his fingers and burst toy cannon too long ago to remember all the joy of it.' Washington's nose was also slightly elevated in the center, and he had massive jaws which made him resolute and determined. Gen. Grant's nose is but slightly arched, while that of General Lee was short and almost straight, showing civil talents in a marked degree as well as a disciple of Mars. General Hancock's nose is of the Lee mold, and demonstrates similar characteristics. Hancock is a man who would fight gallantly for a principle, and then show large cpacity as a civil ruler or agent of the people, Stonewall Jackson possessed heavy iron-set jaws, and a long, full, almost straight nose like that of Marshal MacDonald, who was always selected by Napoleon for daring enterprise. The nose of a real civilian is almost invariably of I to the resider moderate length, and running from under the eyes in a nearly straight line, and yet may have immense courage as its hidden characteristic. Sir Robert Peel's nose was arched, but he is an exception to the rule in civil life. After a great war, the men of short noses come to the front as civil reorganizers. If to a Roman nose and heavy set jaws is added a large, prominent chin, the possessor needs watching by a free people. Large chins index an animal nature or not. Retreating chins are evidences of great personal delicacy, of the sentimental or poet temperament, and yet from very pride the owners when pressed fight like demons. If a man desires a wife who will give him no trouble, let him select one with a pug, or at best with a straight nose, moderate jaws, and a chin gently decreasing from the hollow under the lower lip. So sure as he marries woman with an arched nose, strong and protuberant jaws, and a big chin, he will never be master of his own house. Such a Q. A. Henry, pastor. PRACTICAL HINTS ABOUT GLASSES.

Persons finding their eyes becoming dry and itching on reading, as well as those who find it necessary to place an object nearer than fourteen inches from the face

Persons under 40 years of age should not wear glasses until the accommodating power of the eye has been suspended, and the exact state of refraction determined by a competent opthalmic surgeon.

The spectacle glasses sold by peddlers, and by jewelers generally, are hurtful to the eyes of those who read much, as the lenses are made of inferior sheet glass and are not systematically ground.

No matter how perfectly the lenses may be made, unless they are mounted in a suitable frame and properly placed before the eye, discomfort will arise from their prolonged use.

This done, the insect begins throwing out the sand; some is carried, but the greater part is removed on a plan that at least shows an attempt at labor-saving. With a quick movement the worker shovels a load upon its head, and by a backward upward jerk hurls it far out of the excavation. If a pebble or stone is met with it is tossed out in the same way, masses half as large as the worker being hurled over a foot away. When a large stone is encountered the inengineer seems to know that the rock can't be tossed, and so he carefully rolls it upon cline of the pit. Naturally the stone would roll off of any incline, but to avert this the insect lifts its tail high in air, and so crawls up the side with the stone on a the pit is completed it represents the cast have cost $40." of an inverted cone, and at the bottom the insect conceals itself, leaving only its two enormous jaws protruding. Perhaps when half-way down the ant regains a foothold, and seems in a fair way to escape, but the trap-maker throws off all concealment, quickly shovels sand upon its head, and hurls a load at the victim, who rolls down helpless into the enemy's jaws, and is destroyed. When the trap-maker has sucked the blood, he unceremoniously hoists the remains upon his head and Now, den, who am you?" throws them out upon the sand. The pit is then repaired for the next victim. 'Among the animal workers all occupations are found. Take a colony of bees, for instance. In forming a nest one set of Among the ants the workers not only have their share of work to do, but they differ from the others in shape and general appearance, the kings, queens, soldiers and laborers being markedly different in apthe enemy is not visible they return, and the laborers come out and begin repairs.

The army ants of South America show great intelligence. The workers, like our goes hungry an' dodge creditors fur de sake sappers and miners, often go ahead and of blindin' people's eyes. A woman form a protective arch, under which the soldiers march, and so rapidly is this bizness wid silks and diamonds, a $15 hat thrown up that the onward march is not delayed. The farmer or grain ants of Europe store up vast supplies in underground granaries.

"How is it the seeds don't sprout?" asked the reporter.

"That's the most wonderful part of it. The seeds don't sprout, though there they are, planted underground and kept fresh. I have seen five or six ants awaiting their turn to milk one of these cows. The ants often collect the eggs of the aphides, place them on plants near their homes, and care for them in many ways, just as we do for our blooded In the fall ants have been known to take their cows underground and try to keep them through the winter. Many ants keep beetles and other insects as pets. some as playfellows, others on account of their odor. Several hundred distinct species of insects are in this way kept prisoners under ground. "In engineering the ants are equally skillful. They bridge wide rivers by joining together their bodies, clinging one to another, and thus forming a long string that the wind blows across the stream In this way a bridge is formed over which an entire army passes.

"Here is the tube of a marine worm. You see it was first formed of finely ground pieces of sand—in fact, of anything the animal could get hold of, just as the inner walling of a house is made of rough material; but when it comes to the exterior there is a chance for decoration. As the builder uses finer woods for the outside, so the worm has applied all those delicate shells, so that the tube seems made up of them. Here is another shell called when it says that the tongue is an unruly the Phorus, found in Japanese waters. It affects large bivalve shells, and in some way sticks them about its shell. Now, it the animal had no taste, the first old shell or stone that came along would be used, but, as you see, nothing but these shells are used. stinct. Certain ones in Africa are said to fasten fireflies to their nests, that gleam at night like so many diamonds. Another African bird bites off all its tail feathers except the tip of longest plume, and thus gives itself a jaunty air. The horn-bills color their feathers artificially from certain glands. A family of birds found in Australia, and allied to the birds of paradise, bring shells and other objects miles from the sea, and decorate their playhouses with them. Some fancy curious bones, others shells, and others prefer fresh

"Now, as to builders. The architectural ability of birds almost equals that of man. Some nests, like those of a West Indian blackbird, are hotels, and are built by several birds, who sit on any or all of the eggs, as it happens. Then there are flats class of men or an occupation followed by built by the tailor birds, where the residences are side by side and protected by a percarpenter bee, that bores a hole as perfect The reporter suggested the dynamite as the finest instrument of human make and forms a partition of the sawdust. THE CHEMIST AND THE ROSE, here once was a chemist who found a rose. Dewy and fresh in its frazrant bloom;

'I wonder," quoth he, "how this fair flower grown
And from whence it gathers its sweet perfume."

So he plucked the rose in this belief;
"I will carry it home and search out where,
Deftly hidden in petal or leaf, Is this fragrance sweet that scents the air Then over his fire with alembic and still He burned it up and he boiled it down With acids and alkalies, until The rose and its sweet perfume were gone.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS,

"Retrospect of a Long Life." By S. C. Hall, F. S. A. New York : D. Appleton & odds and ends that are universally interesting. The author did not need to write: "A man of letters by profession," under his name on the title page, the whole book being unevery subject of importance to reading mankind-in short, a journalist. Mr. Hall was born with the century, and at 33 is able to by A. L. Bancroft & Co., San Francisco. sketch vividly from personal recollection the sedan chairs, the boisterous clergy, the rebust eating and drinking, the unsatisfactory daof long ago; the Houses of Lords and Commons (Mr. Hall began life as a Parliamentary reporter); the origin of some public charities; the authors, actors and artists the writer has known, and recollections of Scotland, Ireland, Paris and Germany. Each subject is treated in paragraphs, short or long as its scope de-mands, the theme indicated at the beginning of the paragraph in small capitals. There is great variety, and the whole makes a book delightful to turn over and dip into at ran-dom. The biographical parts are very gosalpy and entertaining, while always charita-ble, and in the case of notable scandals and infelicities, gravely reticent. In the essay, for it is almost that, on the elder Lord Lyt-ton—which is classified with Recollections of Early Editing, because Mr. Hall was Bul-wer's sub-editor on the New Monthly Maga-tine—we are told that the present Lord Lytton is preparing a memoir of his illustrious father, who is described as having been scutely and morbidly sensitive to attack and ridicule, and therefore persecuted by the wasps of criticism until his life was an ageny. The Recollections are warmly laudatory of Irish character and sympa-thetic with the troubles of the Irish nation, the rural destitution in the days of tithes and middlemen being very graphically described. July is an entertaining number of this brigh Mr. Hall's wife was Irish, and he pays affectively little publication for the budding "wee ones." tionate tribute to her character and writings, she having been, it appears, so pround with her pet that she constantly read sketches of to attract and entertain. as hers. Mr. Hall announces and defends his firm faith in Spiritualism, and writes that William and Mary Howitt were also conwilliam and Mary Howitt were also con-vinced Spiritualists, and that in their house he was in communication with spirits of dead friends. In the portrait of Mr. Hall, which forms the frontispiece of the volume, there is to be traced somewhat of the look of the mystic. There is throughout the book an al-most comic loyalty to Queen Victoria, "God bless her" being always added after any men-tion of her name. The avvarious ledy sottled tion of her name. The sovereign lady settled a literary pension on both Mr. Hall and his wife. The index, while it is complete, is not altogether satisfactory, names of persons and places being sometimes arbitrarily classed. For sale by James T. White & Co., San "Dust: A Novel." By Julian Haw-thorne. New York: Fords, Howard & Hurlbert. Mr. Hawthorne writes in avowed protest against the novel of analysis, opposing athereto the novel of plot and incident but this his latest story owes much of its in-terest to very searching and subtle analysis in the case of the three principal characters. The scene is laid entirely in England in the year 1820, when "horseflesh was one of the most influential religions in England; puglism being another, caste a third, and drunkenness the fourth." The rise of a great banking house, whose head at the time of the story also runs a great gambling house, jeopardizing the one for the other, is excellently told. Mr. Hawthorne is not coldly superior to being very much in love with one of his heroines, yet he bravely shows her to be one of the women whose love is a man's best edu-cation, yet one whom a man of balance and judgment would much prefer not to marry. Perdita is beautiful, subtle, luxurious, supple in mind as body, singularly well-bred, and so worldly that one doubts a little whether she would, logically, have committed suicide as her creator makes her do, and there is the falseness and glitter about her which is the outcome of French training. Altogether she is a remarkably well-drawn character. Philip Lancaster, the hero, is a good study of a literary character. Intense vanity, coupled with morbid self-depreciation, inveterate self-analysis, fitful capacity for hard work, the gift of loving and the intuition to love the woman who will have the best influence upon him; an audacious im-agination which is bewitched with the reck-lessness of intrigue, and a calm dominating intellect which shows him the folly of flying in the face of society these—are the elements of the nature which Mr. Hawthorne has decertain town in his rounds. This was reveloped by the action of his story. What keeps the novel from being even very great is a lack of calmness, a certain tinge of revolt and morbidity in the author's own conception of the universe, which constantly jars upon the reader and throws him into a state of pro-test. It is very uncomfortable of Philip not to say that he loves his Marian on the last page, and only a man in a passing mood of irritation would answer his wife by saying dog that whenever the moon shines goes that such men as he were the curse of the out upon the steps and barks, and barks The literary style is excellent, though the use of the contraction "'tis" for "it is" is so prevalent as to become teasing; and if this is characteristic of the year 1820, so, as Mr. Harthorne justly observes, were "doosid" and "zounds," yet he has left those expletives to the imagination. Under this name Mr. Cable has collected his Creole this name Mr. Cable has collected his Creele stories, many of which appeared in the Century Magazine, into two handy little volumes bound in red-brown paper covers, each volume complete in itself. "Madame Delphine" is the most elaborate, and perhaps the best of the first volume; "Posson Jone," of the second. Mr. Cable has found a new field in the picture server and dilect of Name. the second. Mr. Cable has found a new field in the picturesque scenes and dialect of New Orleans before the war, and he has been able to work his idea. The languer and slight tumble-to-pieces air of the South is conveyed one scarcely knows how, not in direct words certainly, and yet the impression is always there. For exquisite fitness of words to the thing described this of Madame Delphine's daughter could hardly be surpassed: "She had the coft, lack-luster beauty of the South; no been dealt with in the last thirty years undaughter could hardly be surpassed. Such lad the soft, lack-luster beauty of the South; no ruddiness of coral, no waxen white, no pink of skell; no heavenly blue in the glance; but three and four thousand families living in of shell; no heavenly blue in the glance; but a face that seemed, in all its other beauties, only a tender accompaniment for the large brown eyes. * * * We say no color of shell on face or throat; but this was no deficiency, that which took its place being the warm, transparent tint of sculptured ivory." The relations of the priests to their parishippers is your heavifully told, the author The relations of the priests to their parishioners is very beautifully told, the author seeming to appreciate the grace and tender-ness and artistic value of the unselfishness produced by genuine religious feeling. "My Trivial Life." By A Plain Woman. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons. This is one of the transatlantic novels, and is in two eyes of a plain girl—that is, a young woman who has the inexplicable incapacity for at-tracting the attention of men, and yet who is original, observant, fall of good common sense, courageous, and not in the least spite-ful. There is an evangelical, cauting, twaddling aunt; a musical society, whose performances and jealousies are most amusically recorded; Brahms, "with a voice accompaniment," is a perfect triumph of high art affectation; and some giggling girls, whose effort to model themselves upon the style of a rapid lady of fashion is to the life. The book shows the patty pagging induor part book shows the petty, nagging, in-door part of a conventionally-bred woman's life, and the heroine's courageous, spirited fashion of asserting herself against boredom and infinitesimal annoyances makes one wish her a better fate than to be helples ly married to a man weak enough to remain a thrall to a cally country headed acceptate. FIGHTING ABOUT TRIFLES.

"Oh," said the second boy, "'tisn't worth mentioning. He knows it isn't so, and I won't stoop to his level by taking any notice of it."

We inwardly thought: "That's a very wise head on young shoulders." It reminded us of two men, one of whom started on a foot journey of 150 miles or more. Two days later the other man followed on the same road, and on the fourth day overtook the first one. The later remarked: "This is the worst and slowest road I ever traveled. There is the greatest lot of snarling, barking little dogs I ever saw, and it has taken half my time to drive them off." "Why," said the second man," "I did not pay any attention to them, but just came right along as if they weren't there."

From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case Yours truly, W. M. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six menths ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the SARSAPARILLA in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect - being now able to do a good day's work, although 73 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct. Yours gratefully, HIRAM PHILLIPS."

HOUSE

Will continue to be the Farmers', the Mechanics' and the Laboring Man's Choice, and the place where can be obtained any kind of DRY GOODS, FURNISHING GOODS, BOOTS AND SHORS; or, in fact, almost any article required at the lowest consistent advance on wholesale prices.

The Reasons for the Discontinuance of the Trade Union Fully Set Forth.

With Our Enlargement of Space, Our Intention is to Greatly Increase the Amount of Stock Carried.

HEAVY PURCHASES WILL ENABLE US TO BUY TO ADVANTAGE, AND OUR PATRONS ARE ALWAYS GIVEN A SHARE IN RARE PURCHASES.

The RED HOUSE opened February 2, 1874, and a few years afterwards, foreseeing the advantage it would be to the public, established the TRADE UNION.

Which gave to the members thereof the benefit of purchasing goods at ACTUAL COST OF PURCHASE AND HANDLING, those belonging paying

ONE DOLLAR

A month for the privilege. By this means persons were given the advantage of buying all the goods they wanted at wholesale prices. Many availed themselves of this offer, became members, and were more than pleased with the result, as for the small sum of one dollar they placed themselves in the position of a man of unlimited means going into the market to purchase large quantities of goods. Since that time the TRADE UNION has existed, and thousands have reaped the benefit of the arrangement. But as we are now selling at the lowest possible figure above ACTUAL COST, believing in active sales at minimum profits, the advantage to members of the TRADE UNION is not so large, and as it works in many instances against us, we have concluded to abandon it as soon as the time of each individual expires, and we shall take no more new members after this date. The difficulties and embarrassments that we labored under, which have induced us to abandon it arose from the indiscretion of members. For instance, a member of the UNION would purchase of us an article, telling his neighbor that he procured it at a certain price, but not explaining to him that he was a member of the TRADE UNION and paid his dollar a month in advance for the benefit of getting goods at cost. The neighbor would call for the same article, and being charged a trifle more, immediately came to the conclusion that there was a discrimination in favor of the neighbor, and hence dissatisfaction arose.

Having recently enlarged our business, and by buying in such great quantities we shall be able to sell goods at so small a margin that old members of the TRADE UNION will be able to purchase goods of us at such low figures that they will scarcely perceive the difference; and we are satisfied that in the foregoing explanations they will see that our grounds for the discontinuance of the TRADE UNION are good. We invite the patronage of all old customers that have been associated with us for so many years, and trust that our relations may continue as pleasant in the future as in the past,

In abandoning the UNION, we will be able to sell in the aggregate some things cheaper than heretofore, because all of our customers will be paying the same

It has been the aim of the ablest stove-makers of the present century to invent something in the shape of a stove or range so perfect in its construction and so simple in its working capacity, that the kitchen which it so prominently occupies could be made a place where its duties could be done with pleasure, instead of what it now is and has been, simply a place of drudgery for those whose duties compelled them to be there. Row Among a Comedy Company.

San Francisco, July 6th.—The departure of the Leonard Grover Comedy Company for Victoria this afternoon was attended with considerable excitement. George Osborne, the leading man, insisted on having a stateroom on the steamer set part for himself and wife, the ladies having been assigned to rooms by themselves. The manager demurred himself and wife, the ladies having been assigned to rooms by themselves. The manager demurred, and was told by Osborne that unless he acceded to his request he would not accompany the troupe. The manager was obdurate, and Osborne and his wife left the steamer, taking their traps with them, after handing over the parts they should have studied. When the steamer was about to pull out words arose between Leonard Grover and Osborne, and finally the former's son, who is a comedian of the troupe, stepped in the crowd, dealing Osborne a blow in the face, while his father attempted to strike him with a cane. Young Grover raa up the plank with his coat considerably abbreviated.

Not Kicked to Death-Woman Fatally Cut. San Francisco, July 6th.—The inquest held on the body of Robert Hart, whose death was attrib-uted to the kicking administered by Thos. Fogarty on the night of the Fourth, reveals the cause of death to have been from lack of blood in the brain, abstantiating the claim of Fogarty that he did not

A cutting affray occurred this evening, in which a woman named Mrs. Fellows received fatal injuries at the hand of John Hennessy, a retired soldier. It appears that Hennessy, who had been drinking heavily of late, made improper remarks concerning the woman, and was threatened with punishment by er husband. The men met a few days ago, and the result was a fight, in which Fellows was worsted. Since that time Hennessy has carried a razor with him, and this evening walked into Fellows' house, and seeing her, cut her with the razor, making a leep gash, extending from the right jaw to the left side of the neck, and severing the jugular vein.

TRUCKER, July 6th.—A two-year-old son of J. H. Dillon, section foreman at Bronco, thirteen miles east of Truckee, was drowned about 7 o'clock Wednesday evening. A small tub had been sunk into the ground near the section-house, into which ran a stream of water, and the little one, playing around, fell into it head foremost. The child was not missed for some time afterwards, and when taken from the water life was quite extinct. Every possible endeavor was made to resuscitate it. Actossible endeavor was made to resuscitate it. Act ng Coroner John Keiser held an inquest, and the ary returned a verdict of accidental death. Small Fire at Red Bluff.

RED BLUFF, July 6th- A fire destroyed a small house in the western addition at 3 o'clock this morning, belonging to A. H. Webb, Secretary of the State Board of Horticulture. The loss amounts to about $350. Being unoccupied, it is believed the fire was incendiary, and done for the purpose of attracting attention from the heart of the city, so that other misdeeds might be accomplished; the attempt failed, as the fire department rema quiet, only the western addition company going to NAPA, July 6th.—A few months ago the house of R. Ffouts, located on disputed Government land near Calistoga, was blown up by giant powder. It was thought to be the work of Pfouts' enemies, and much sympathy was extended to him in a suit in which he was engaged. Parties were arrested yesterday in Yolo county and are confined in jail here, who confess to having been hired by some one to destroy Pfouts' house for a certain sum. The affair is anyeloned in mystery.

SANTA FB, July 6th.—The fifth day's programme of the terrio-millennial anniversary exposition attracted a great crowd, and thus far the venture has tracted a great crowd, and thus far the venture has resulted in a manner most gratifying to the directors and visitors alike. There was a special programme, consisting of an Indian militia skirmish and cavalry drill, native Mexican sports and pastimes, and in the auternoon the national dance—"Las Malachines"—which dates its origin far back in the misty traditions of the Pueblo Indians, was successfully carried out, as was also the Indian drama, "Wooing of Monteruma"

Bodies Recovered.

SALT LAKE, July 6th.—The bodies of Robert Ritter and William Ayer, drowsed in Silver Lake on the 4th, were recovered yesterday. It seems that Ritter and Ayer had taken a young man by the name of Amos Shopten out in a boat, with a view of scaring him, he being unable to swim. The boat upset, and while he clung to it, they struck out for shore, and the water being very cold, they became cramped and drowned—the victims of their own folly.

Disastrous Powder Explosion. OGDEN, July 6th.—A building of the Utah Pow-der Works Company, located in Ogden canyon, ex-ploded about 5:30 this evening, blowing the building to atoms, instantly killing a man named Porter and injuring several other workmen. The charred remains of Porter were found with a board driven through his neck by the force of the explosion.
